Established in 1959, the Overseas Human Resources and Industry Development Association (HIDA) is a human resource development organization which promotes technical cooperation such as the training programs to industrial human resources mainly in developing countries and experts dispatch programs. Through these programs, it contributes to mutual economic development of Japan and overseas countries and promotion of friendly relationships.

In recent years, Japanese companies have been increasingly expanding their business to overseas, mainly to emerging countries. With this background, the HIDA Research Institute was established in April 2013 to contribute to overseas business expansion by Japanese companies by making effective use of a network of industrial human resources in overseas developed by HIDA.
